FRANCE SKEPTICAL ON REFINANCING OF RUSSIA

They Repudiate Billions Borrowed from Us, Brag About It; We Need It, Paris Sentiment.

BY STEPHEN LAUSANNE. (BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.)

PARIS, Jan. 20.—France is skeptical about the reconstruction of Russia. When Millerand heard that at Cannes Briand had accepted the invitation to participate in the international conference at Genoa for the economic reconstruction of Europe he telegraphed immediately:

"It is not without regret and apprehension that I learn of your decision to go and sit at a conference opposite Lenin."

That was the opening of the late Ministerial crisis. There are some 90 per cent of Frenchmen who share the apprehension and regrets of their President and not in a thousand believes the famous conference at Genoa can result in anything reasonable or practical.

May I explain why? The conference they inform us suggests the economic reconstruction of Germany, Russia and Europe, the re-establishment of world trade. Now what is the meaning of trade? It is buying and selling.

What can Russia buy? Nothing since she has no money to pay with. Her rulers have dissipated gold which belongs to the State and have printed banknotes by the hundreds of billions. Last week on the Moscow exchange the gold ruble was worth 100,000 paper rubles.

DON'T KEEP WORD. Furthermore they have declared that when one deals with capitalists there is no obligation to keep one's word. This prevents them from buying on credit, for when one buys on credit, guarantees must be given, and what guarantees can Russia give?

How can Russia give? Almost nothing, since she has no money to pay with. Her rulers have dissipated gold which belongs to the State and have printed banknotes by the hundreds of billions. Last week on the Moscow exchange the gold ruble was worth 100,000 paper rubles.

Now there are no roads in Russia and three-quarters of the Russian railroads have been entirely destroyed. In order to reconstruct them it is necessary to have a large sum of money, and this is what Russia cannot give.

Where are the millions to come from? Where can workmen be found? No one having so far given a satisfactory reply to these questions the French shrug their shoulders when one mentions the certificate of the Pontiff.

BUTLER HITS AT SCHOOLS

States Education Loses Ground.

Foreign System Superior to That of America; Even Trades Are Hurt.

Moving Sidewalks Planned for Congested Streets of New York.

BY LOUIS LEE ARMS. (EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Is our educational system gradually losing ground? Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, thinks so. In a current report he sharply criticizes some of our leading Eastern universities as being, in effect, mere glorified country clubs.

Study is now secondary to the futile art of becoming sophisticated. Latin and Greek have been given the bum's rush. Euclid is being pushed into obscurity. We are, by every sign becoming a superficial and undereducated people.

With scholastic facilities a hundred-fold easier of access than they were a hundred years ago, the college graduates of today have not the substantial education of his forefathers, who knew more than a little Latin and not less of Greek.

SHY SKILLED MEN. Not only in the higher learning, but in the development of skilled men power is being lost. According to the New York Times, the present high cost of building has been attributed to the lack of opportunities in the United States for the training of craftsmen.

The shortage in the East has been known for some time. Nor is this scarcity of talent confined to building. A survey of the silver industry made under the auspices of the National Society for Vocational Education, reveals the fact that virtually no silver smiths are being trained in this country except at the expense of knowledge in the shop. One manufacturer declares that unless the silver working industry will die out in the next ten years, it will be a system of apprenticeship by which the craft of the skilled worker went into decay during the middle of the nineteenth century.

FOREIGN SCHOOLS. As machinery came into general use, which permitted quantity reproduction from the model of the skilled artist, schools became necessary to train the expert craftsmen. To meet this need before the war France had thirty-seven industrial art schools and the South Kensington Museum supplied traveling exhibits to some 350 art schools and ninety country museums. Germany had fifty-nine industrial art schools.

In contrast to this development abroad the United States has but two important industrial art schools. There is no large museum, although such an institution would be of great value to artists and studios far from art centers and to the smaller cities.

In New York there is no school for book binders, none for lithographers and other workers in the graphic arts, none for wood carvers and furniture makers.

Yet the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York offers some hope. Recognizing the need for expert designers and craftsmen, there have recently been conferences among representatives of the following industries: jewelry, silversmiths, cotton, carpets and rug, furniture, interior decoration, lithography and wall paper.

It is believed that out of these conferences sentiment for a national art institute will grow. That such an institution would help to add to the daily life of many millions goes without saying.

MOVING SIDEWALKS. The rustic who, upon seeing a giraffe, promptly declared there was no such animal, will have a chance to repeat himself when New York installs moving sidewalks. If the plan of the transit commission is carried out.

ULSTER PACT WELCOMED

Called Step for Unity.

Both Dublin and Belfast Had Strong Desire for Settlement.

Craig-Collins Agreement Expected to be Accepted by Followers.

(BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.) DUBLIN, Jan. 22.—The agreement between Michael Collins and Sir James Craig, Ulster premier, concerning the boycott and the boundary between north and south Ireland, has been welcomed in Dublin as the first step toward Irish unity.

Both sides are regarded as having had the strongest reasons for desiring the agreement. The Belfast boycott was paralyzing all the distributing agencies in Belfast and the Belfast banks, which do a large business in South and West Ireland, had been hard hit by refusals to accept their checks or notes.

GOVERNING MINORITY. The task of governing the minority in Northern Ulster was embarrassing the Belfast government, which was faced with resistance as intense as that offered to the British government by the rest of Ireland. It had become increasingly evident that acute problems outside the boundary between the north and the south required co-operation by both governments.

The threatened railway strike, which has been postponed for a month, was to affect the north as well as the southern lines, although there had arisen many points on general distribution and in a friendly way topics of national and international interest.

CRITICISM EXPECTED. Criticism is expected from the followers of Eamon De Valera, but all friends of the London treaty will, it is considered, accept the Craig-Collins agreement as a desirable result of the treaty.

A gang of men at Kingstown, who were engaged in revolution, seized the car of James MacMahon, the Ulster's secretary, and drove him away and released.

UNEMPLOYED SURRENDER. BELFAST, Jan. 22.—After having held the rotunda of a concert hall in Dublin for four days, the unemployed council of unemployed surrendered and evacuated the premises early today. Exciting scenes were witnessed last night. At one time it seemed likely that the "garrison," would attempt to storm the building, from which shots had been fired.

TRALEE (Ireland) Jan. 22.—An attempt on Friday to seize a police automobile, when one civilian and one constable were wounded, led to a three hours' police and republican. Several participants were wounded.

ABBOT LON IS DIVORCED BY WIFE; INFIDELITY (EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.)

WHITE PLAINS (N. Y.) Jan. 22. A decree of divorce was granted yesterday to Mrs. Elizabeth Clavin Low, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, wife of ex-Mayor Beth Low, of New York, by Supreme Court Justice Young. Mrs. Low appeared in court in fashionable attire. The trial was brief.

A maid employed by the Lows in their New York City home testified that she had seen her husband in the arms of another woman.

VISCOUNT BRYCE, FAMOUS BRITISH PUBLICIST, DIES.

Was Ambassador at Washington; World Figure.

(BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.) LONDON, Jan. 22.—Viscount Bryce died at Sidmouth today.

The end came peacefully and somewhat suddenly. Viscount Bryce had been staying in Sidmouth for three weeks and was extremely energetic to the last.

AS A WORLD FIGURE. As a man of letters and a publicist, Viscount Bryce was a world figure. Outside of his own country he was best known in the United States, where since the early 1890's his interests had so largely centered that he was sometimes styled an "English Yankee."

One remarkable thing repeatedly said of him was that he knew Americans better than most Americans. His work entitled "The American Commonwealth" has been a standard text book in the schools of the United States for the last generation—providing the spectacle of a foreigner instructing Americans in the workings and structure of their own life and laws, as de Tocqueville had done in some extent years previously in his "Democracy in America."

Through his book, through innumerable addresses in this country, and through five years' service as the British ambassador in Washington, Viscount Bryce became one of the most notable human links in the chain of friendly relations between the United States and Great Britain. The extent to which he made his personality felt is explained in part by the fact that while he was a scholar and statesman of the highest rank he always could be found willing to meet people and to discuss publicly and in a friendly way topics of national and international interest.

VARIED ACHIEVEMENTS. He was a man of varied achievements, and mere reference to his interests in America does not by any means sum up his remarkable career. He was called "the most versatile living Englishman," which would be true, says his biographer, had he not been born in Ireland, son of a Scotch father and Irish mother, and educated at Glasgow, whence he went to Oxford.

He was born in Belfast May 19, 1855; his father being the Rev. James Bryce of Glasgow, a clergyman of the established church, and his mother Margaret (Young) Bryce, of County Antrim.

He was educated in the high school and university at Glasgow and subsequently gained a scholarship at Oxford from which he obtained his B.A. degree in 1875, and his D.C.L. in 1879.

He afterwards added to his honors, degrees in many of the most famous universities in the world.

As a matter of dates it is interesting that in 1882, the year of his graduation from Oxford, when he was only 24 years old, appeared his "Holy Roman Empire," a work which has come to be used in colleges and universities the world over and which, like his "American Commonwealth," reflects remarkable capacity for research and philosophical vision. The "Holy Roman Empire" was an expansion of the Arncliffe prize essay which he delivered at his graduation from Oxford.

PRACTICED LAW. Mr. Bryce practiced law in London for fifteen years, and for twenty-three years was honored with the Rectorship of the law at Oxford, the oldest chair in Europe, dating from 1544.

When he was first elected to the House of Commons in 1880, as a Liberal of the most pronounced type, Mr. Bryce was generally considered a failure as a political factor. During the ensuing twenty-two years of parliamentary life, however, he became a landmark in British politics and became recognized as one of the intellectual leaders of his party.

INDIES DUE FOR CHANGE

British Sending Commission.

Trade, Naval, Air Strategy Among the Problems to be Considered.

Dominating Position on the Atlantic Assured by the Islands.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY. (BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.) KINGSTON (Jamaica) Jan. 22. Political and economic changes of far-reaching importance are impending in the West Indies as a result of post-war readjustment.

The chief powers in these waters are now America and Great Britain, although France occupies a strategic position that must not be overlooked in the new planning of air routes and submarine bases.

Trade, naval and air strategy, enter the picture, which led Great Britain in the last few months to wake up regarding the West Indies, ask what is the matter down here and to send out a commission which is now investigating. The announced purpose of the commission is to see what the people want and if it would be safe to give them greater self-government. No question of independence or transfer to the United States is being considered.

FOR CONFEDERATION. On the contrary, there is strong movement emanating from the Empire party in Great Britain to form a West Indies confederation, taking in the British Honduras and Guiana on the South American mainland, with the central government probably residing in Barbados, the windward island that would have a greater voice in imperial affairs. This meeting met with little favor. In fact, the Barbadians, the windward island groups refused to send delegations to a conference called at Port of Spain this month, which was intended for use as a stepping stone to the confederation.

The underlying sentiment is strong for the British flag, but business men fear trade retaliation on the part of the United States, which has a strong market for all these islands. The British, as well as the American West Indies, live largely by trade with North America.

Canada is coveting these gardens in the blue Caribbean and is reaching for an arm around the United States toward them, seeking closer political and trade relations. This movement seems to have a better chance for success than the confederation plan, for the islands have very little interest in common, the trade is in different hands and there is little interisland shipping.

As a result of possessing a string of islands and naval bases from Halifax to Bermuda and circling the Caribbean to the coast of South America, Great Britain dominates the situation on the Atlantic. It is governing in the old crown colony style, tolerantly and perhaps wisely, but with a holding with an iron grip under a velvet glove.

EXAMINATIONS FOR STUDENTS FIXES BLUFFERS. (BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.) NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—A new type of examination for college students which "affords no chance for the bluffer, and removes the examination from the category of sporting propositions," is being tried out at Columbia University.

Instead of asking a few questions on the high spots of the course and encouraging lengthy answers, the new examination consists of a large number of statements concerning matters previously gone over, some of which are true and others false. The student is asked to place a plus sign next to those he considers true, and a minus mark beside the false. This takes up two-thirds of the examination and the old-fashioned test occupies the remainder.

GOLD FLOW HITS AMERICA.

Chairman Hoover in Statement Reviews Economic Conditions in Europe.

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.) WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The United States feels it to be to its own interest that the surplus stocks of gold in the country should be redistributed and utilized in investment in foreign channels, according to a statement on the effect of exchanges of inter-American commerce, made public tonight by the United States section of the Inter-American High Commission, of which Herbert Hoover is the chairman.

The statement expressed the views of the American section on the international gold situation for the information of the Latin American section of the commission.

EXCHANGE SITUATION. The American section in its statement discussed the exchange situation from the European standpoint as well as from the inter-American and United States angles.

In this country, the statement declared, the situation was unfortunate because the high premium on American exchange had attracted the gold flow of the world, resulting in overstocking and a surplus earning of interest and serving no useful purpose.

"The weak, disturbed and unstable storm center in international trade and finance draws us to the inevitable conclusion that there can be no stabilization of exchange upon any footing until there is a cessation of inflation in the principal continental states," says the statement.

UNBALANCED BUDGETS. "Inflation is the result of unbalanced budgets, which themselves are the result of the necessary expansion of the currency to meet the needs of the war."

KU KLUX KLAN IN BIG PARADE. Thousands of Bystanders in Dallas View Marchers in Full Regalia.

(BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.) DALLAS (Tex.) Jan. 22.—Approximately 1500 Ku Klux Klan members, wearing the full regalia of the organization, staged a parade here last night while thousands of bystanders looked on. The marchers then boarded street cars for the Fair Park Coliseum, where a meeting was held.

BATTLED STORM FOR DAYS. (EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.) NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Electrically-driven Norwegian steamship Mod is believed to have foundered early today in the neighborhood of latitude 45.15 N, longitude 41.10 W, after four days of battling storms on the return of her maiden voyage from Christiania, Norway.

The liner George Washington, which went to the aid of the Mod when a wireless S.O.S. was received yesterday, reported that no sign of the freighter could be found at the location given in the wireless.

Ship Sunk, Says Radio.

Survivors of Norwegian Freight Picked up by British Boat; Loss of Life Unknown.

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.) BOSTON, Jan. 22.—The steamer Centennial State reported by radio tonight that the new Norwegian freight steamer Mod had sunk in midocean. The message said the survivors were on board the steamer Melmore Head, but did not indicate whether any members of the crew were lost.

Wireless messages from the British steamer Melmore Head say she is taking off the crew of the Mod, which presumably is sinking. Yesterday's storm tore away her propeller and smashed her bows and the brief wireless information leads to the belief that her bows were also crushed.

BATTLED STORM FOR DAYS. (EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.) NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Electrically-driven Norwegian steamship Mod is believed to have foundered early today in the neighborhood of latitude 45.15 N, longitude 41.10 W, after four days of battling storms on the return of her maiden voyage from Christiania, Norway.

The liner George Washington, which went to the aid of the Mod when a wireless S.O.S. was received yesterday, reported that no sign of the freighter could be found at the location given in the wireless.

THE FOLLOWING MESSAGE WAS SENT OUT BY THE STEAMER CENTENNIAL STATE YESTERDAY: "S.O.S. Norwegian steamer Mod, latitude 45.15 N, longitude 41.10 W, sinking. All lifeboats gone, propeller gone. George Washington going to her assistance. The old-fashioned test occupies the remainder."

FIFTY MEN IN CREW. The Mod was the latest word in marine construction, being one of the few electrically driven freighters on the seven seas. She left New York January 14, with a general cargo for Christiania, the port from which she made her maiden trip here. Capt. Olaf Waerli, a veteran Norwegian navigator, was in command. There were fifty in the crew.

The Mod was owned by Ivan A. Christensen of Christiania, a millionaire ship owner and builder. The Mod is believed to have been caught in the cyclonic gale which swept the north Atlantic ship lane late Wednesday night and early Thursday morning.

PASTOR FAVORS DIVORCE.

If Jesus Were Here Today He Might Recognize Cutting Marital Tie, Says Methodist Preacher.

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.) CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—"The church has placed her guardian angel at the exit of the marriage Eden, but almost forgotten to place any at the entrance."

"The church has placed too many prohibitions on the divorcee side when her neglect to instruct young people on the significance of marriage is considered."

These statements were made by the Rev. John Thompson tonight in a sermon at the First Methodist Church.

Here are other excerpts from his sermon: "Should two persons be compelled to live together when all the affection which constitutes real marriage is dead? Kinsey is said to have relatives in Idaho and Knoll relatives living in Seattle, Wash."

BODY OF POPE LIES IN STATE.

Multitude Visits Vatican to Pay Tribute.

Body of Pontiff Reposes on Catafalque.

Elaborate Ceremonials for Funeral Begin.

At 6 o'clock, I saw the holy father breathe his last. As the other prelates knelt beside the silent and lifeless form, I asked that I might tell the news to the press. I thereupon hurried to the antechamber, where several newspaper men were awaiting events, and informed them that the Pope had died.

The cardinal was asked at what hour death had occurred and he replied "exactly at this minute."

GREAT BELLS TOLL.

At this moment the bells of St. Peter's struck the first stroke of 8 o'clock. Pope Benedict breathed his last at 8 a.m. today. The Pope was announced by Monsignor Pizzardo, deputy papal secretary of state, just as the ponderous bells of St. Peter's began tolling at 8 o'clock. Then one by one the bells in Rome's 400 churches joined in the horologium symphony that marked the passing of the Pope.

The end came after an anxious night of intense agony and suffering. The pontiff then, after lapsing into delirium. Shortly before midnight he took a little nourishment, which seemed momentarily to revive his spirits, but within an hour he began to sink rapidly. At 11:55 o'clock Dr. Battistini told the Associated Press correspondent that the end was approaching, that already his hands and feet were cold. From that period the Pope ceased to breathe. Breathing became an agonizing task as the pontiff, who had related the severe lung and throat congestion, was too weak to overcome the overwhelming attack.

His eyes were half closed as he lay in state. Cardinal Gasparrini, Monsignor Sampaio and Pizzardo and all the pontifical household were notified that the end was approaching. Cardinal Gasparrini approached the bedside at 1:30 o'clock, walking with short, rapid steps to the bedside of the dying pontiff. He placed his hands on the forehead of the Pope, who breathed his last.

Cardinal Gasparrini, grand penitentiary, attended the pontiff until midnight. He was assisted by Monsignor Ruggieri, prefect of ceremonies, and by Monsignors Testini, Piermonti and Magnanelli. A half hour before he died his hands were cold. He was lying on his back, his hands and feet were numb. It was at this moment that it was decided to call all the pontifical family to his bedside. The royal guards were sent out to notify the papal secretary of state of the Pope's condition.

CARDINALS PRESENT.

Late yesterday evening virtually all the cardinals resident in Rome were in attendance at the Vatican, their arrival at the pontifical apartment being accompanied by solemn reverence by those present. After midnight the crowd which had waited many hours around the Vatican diminished to only a few men and women, and the atmosphere of the pontifical apartment was one of deep gloom. No one was allowed to enter the Vatican and the species hall became almost deserted, with only an occasional guard quietly pacing the corridors and staircases.

Guards were stationed at the outer door to the pontifical apartment on the top floor, and on the middle of the same door there were two guardsmen. Then, as the entrance of the ante-chamber, at the other end of a short corridor, was a corporal of the Swiss guard, who permitted none to pass unless they furnished proper credentials.

VATICAN IN SILENCE.

From midnight until 5 o'clock there was practically no movement through the apartments and corridors, save an occasional visit by Dr. Battistini. It was not until the Pope actually passed away that a stir in the Vatican family together was made.

A formal announcement of the Pope's passing was the occasion for a scene of deep emotion. All those present in the ante-chamber, vest, and the private knelt in prayer. Shortly afterward Cardinal Gasparrini proceeded with the formal taking over of the temporary charge of the affairs of the church. He will be the nominal head of the church until a new Pope is elected.

Throughout the night small groups clustered in St. Peter's Square. Everyone leaving the Vatican was anxiously questioned. Toward 5:30 it was announced that the end was near and at a few minutes of 6 the Swiss guards inside the Vatican could be seen kneeling. A few minutes later the door was shut, and thus the Pope's death was announced.

The noble guards then cleared a space before the gate of the Vatican, allowing only those connected with the papal household to pass. Although it was still dark, the crowd began to increase. Toward 6 o'clock the bells of St. Peter's tolled slowly the signal that the pontiff had passed. Masses were celebrated at various altars in the Vatican.

PREMIER NOTIFIED.

The first person outside of the immediate pontifical circle to be informed of the Pope's death was Premier Bonomi, who notified the King and other high dignitaries of state, as well as the governors of the colonies. For the first time in the history of relations between Rome and the Vatican, the government instructed the flag to be hoisted on all government offices in observance of the Pope's death.

Already everyone is recalling the ceremonies of stateful pomp of which the dead pontiff now will be the center during the next few days, beginning with the gathering of the cardinals in the death chamber, where they called the the silent figure three times by his Christian name before pronouncing him officially dead. This will be followed by the historic ceremony of removing the fisherman's ring, which will be drawn off the Pope's fingers by Cardinal Gasparrini, who will destroy it and have it re-set for Benedict's successor. Then will come the elaborate preparations for the embalming of the body and for the three-day ceremony during which it will lie in state in St. Peter's Chapel before burial.

Speculation already is rife concerning a successor. Cardinal Gasparrini is considered the most prominent candidate, although the election of a papal secretary is almost without precedent.

The College of Cardinals understood to be divided into two fairly equal groups on the Pope's successor. The groups represent those who wish the Pope to come from outside Italy and those who think he should be a native. The election of a foreign cardinal, it is said, must be a compromise between certain members of the sacred college, like Cardinal Merry Del Val, a native of Spain, do not hide their preference for a native Italian. Among the native Italians, Cardinal Maffi, of Pisa, is the most strongly supported in Italian centers. His advanced modern ideas are likely to arouse opposition, particularly in the group headed by Cardinal Merry Del Val.

Because of these two opposing groups, Cardinal Gasparrini may be chosen as a compromise between them.

Cardinal Gasparrini, grand penitentiary, attended the pontiff until midnight. He was assisted by Monsignor Ruggieri, prefect of ceremonies, and by Monsignors Testini, Piermonti and Magnanelli. Cardinal Gasparrini, grand penitentiary, attended the pontiff until midnight. He was assisted by Monsignor Ruggieri, prefect of ceremonies, and by Monsignors Testini, Piermonti and Magnanelli. A half hour before he died his hands were cold. He was lying on his back, his hands and feet were numb. It was at this moment that it was decided to call all the pontifical family to his bedside. The royal guards were sent out to notify the papal secretary of state of the Pope's condition.

Dr. Haywood told of Mrs. Bull's wanderings. Dr. Haywood is a former pastor of a Baptist church in New York which the Bulls attended before moving to Ridgewood, and now conducts a rest farm at Mount Gilead. It was to him that Mrs. Bull went after wandering through many Eastern States—her mind a blank.

"Mrs. Bull is in a serious condition," said Dr. Haywood. "Her mind is affected and I do not know whether she will be able to go home when her husband comes for her. She has threatened to commit suicide, and did try this morning. We have to watch her every minute."

INTRIGUING IN EUROPE.

Catholic Nations Form Combinations; Anti-French Alliance Is Seen.

BY HENRY WALES. (EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.)

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The Catholic capitals of Europe are intriguing to secure the selection of a successor to Pope Benedict who will be acceptable to their respective nations. It is stated that the election will be the most open ever held on account of the elimination of Austria's age-long right to veto, which formerly assured the Hapsburg nominee of success.

The numerous factions are jockeying to put their candidates in a strong position, but no one is strong enough to succeed alone.

GROUPS FORMING.

The following groups already are preparing for the election around the Pope's death bed: Central Europe, with the Pan-German interests, are dominating the Austro-Hungarians, because it is realized that only a union can provide the strength which the Hapsburg veto gave before.

Poland and Czecho-Slovakia form a mysterious element, but it is believed that they will rally to the French selection.

The Italians are preparing a vast web of intrigue. Spies in London, which it is feared will eventually join the Central European interests through jealousy of France's championship of Catholic interests in Syria and the Near East and the fear of strengthening French prestige, which already is dangerous owing to France's military supremacy.

ANGLO-SAXON ELEMENT.

With the Anglo-Irish peace it is believed that both the Catholics and Irish will fall in line with the Anglo-Saxon Catholicism for the diplomatic and moral importance of the Vatican was recognized only a union can provide the strength which the Hapsburg veto gave before.

It is not expected that a well-known cardinal like Gasparrini or even the Pope himself will be elected. It is believed that a more docile and therefore more easy to handle, European interests through jealousy of France's championship of Catholic interests in Syria and the Near East and the fear of strengthening French prestige, which already is dangerous owing to France's military supremacy.

TRIBUTES TO POPE BENEDICT.

(BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The death of Pope Benedict was declared by Senator Schaner, head of the Italian arms delegation, to be a "great loss, not only for the Holy See and for the Catholic Church, but for the world." Senator Schaner, in a statement, added:

"Indeed, the Pope exercised his high ministry for the good of the peoples at large and with a sincere and profound feeling coupled with a rare, broad-mindedness."

LITTLE EXPECTED.

"When Cardinal Della Chiesa was raised to the pontificate, the modest appearance of his person and his former ecclesiastical career, which had been quite honorable, but not exceptional, did not cause in the world the expectation that great things could come from the new Pope."

"Instead, he soon showed that he was a man of great heart and of a generous spirit. His action, modest and unassuming, was a source of inspiration to the world. He was a man of great heart and of a generous spirit. His action, modest and unassuming, was a source of inspiration to the world."

DIPLOMATIC ACTION.

"The diplomatic action of Benedict XV in the relations of the papacy with the various Catholic and non-Catholic countries was crowned with success and considerably augmented the prestige of the Holy See."

"The Pope tried also to establish a better relation with Italy, that his death will certainly be a source of grief to the Italian people. Benedict XV was a man of great heart and of a generous spirit. His action, modest and unassuming, was a source of inspiration to the world."

HAD GENEROUS HEART.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Senator Roland Rice, the Italian Ambassador on hearing of the death of the Pope, made the following statement:

"The Pope, who just died, was a man of sagacious political vision and of a high moral character. His death will be a source of grief to the Italian people. Benedict XV was a man of great heart and of a generous spirit. His action, modest and unassuming, was a source of inspiration to the world."

"The Pope tried also to establish a better relation with Italy, that his death will certainly be a source of grief to the Italian people. Benedict XV was a man of great heart and of a generous spirit. His action, modest and unassuming, was a source of inspiration to the world."

NEARLY ALL ITALIANS.

From St. Peter to Benedict XV, he said, there had been many Italian Popes, but only one who was nearly all Italian.

"The forty-eight," he continued, "included fifteen French, ten German, seven Swiss, three Spanish, three Englishmen, one Portuguese and one Dutch. I have no doubt that the future Pope will be an Italian."

The Sacred College abounds with illustrious Italian cardinals, and the Vatican, which it is true that the Pope is the head of the Catholic Church, is a source of inspiration to the world."

Immediately word was received of the death of the Pope, the Italian flag on the Embassy was ordered to fly at half-staff and similar orders were sent to all Italian Consulates in the United States as a sign of mourning.

STROVE FOR PEACE.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 22.—Pope Benedict XV during his pontificate stood out as the representative of the Prince of Peace, Archbishop John J. Glennon stated to the Associated Press.

The archbishop said: "Elected to the supreme office of the papacy on Sept. 3, 1914, he was to witness the nations of Europe in deadly array and gravely did he face the World War bearing in his hands the standard of peace."

"It saddened his heart that his appeals for peace and justice were received with suspicion and in silence, and in some instances with a league purpose of rejecting them. Yet, through these long years of bloody and destructive war, even to the end of his too brief pontificate, he stood out before the world

AMERICANS MAY BE TOO LATE.

Two Cardinals Prepare to Depart for Rome.

May Meet to Elect New Pope February First.

Gasparrini Seems Favorite as Next Pontiff.

(BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Two American members of the Sacred College of Cardinals, O'Connell, of Boston, and Dougherty, of Philadelphia, will leave as early as possible to attend the conclave for the election of a successor to Pope Benedict. It was said here tonight.

Cardinal O'Connell will sail Tuesday while Cardinal Dougherty is expected to return from a vacation trip Friday and probably will sail Saturday.

MAY BE TOO LATE.

It was said here that the conclave may meet February 1. The fear was expressed if the conclave is as short as that which resulted in the election of Benedict, both the American members may arrive too late to participate.

After the death of Pius X, Aug. 26, 1914, the conclave began August 21, and the new Pope was elected September 2.

Cardinal Gasparrini, Papal Secretary of State, is spoken of here as a possible successor to Benedict. By virtue of his position he has been in charge of the Papal household and of the church since 9 o'clock this morning. His presence at the helm insures the continuity of the policy followed by the Vatican since the advent of Benedict XV.

WARM CORDIALITY.

Persons acquainted with rivalries and jealousies which characterize relations between persons who occupy similar positions in the civil governments, have been surprised to learn of the warm cordiality and affection of the Pope toward his Secretary of State and the devotion and affection of the latter toward the Pope.

The Pope was small and frail, while Gasparrini is above medium height and rather stout, but they were both indefatigable workers. In his responsible position of chamberlain during the obsequies of the Pope and during the conclave, Cardinal Gasparrini will be assisted by the deans of the three orders of the cardinals are grouped, namely, cardinal bishops, cardinal priests and cardinal deacons. The authorized maximum membership of the Sacred College cannot surpass seventy, but only the cardinals existing are now sixty-one, of whom thirty-one are Italians and thirty foreigners.

SIX CARDINAL BISHOPS.

There are only six cardinal bishops, to whom are entrusted the six dioceses immediately around Rome. Their dean is Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli. Since the death of Cardinal Gibbons, he also is the dean of the Sacred College. Although 85 years old, he does not show his age and seems twenty years younger. An unwritten rule prohibits cardinals to walk inside of Rome, but he did not observe it.

The order of the cardinal priests would comprise fourteen members. Their dean is Cardinal Gaetano Baiseti, for whom many thousands of Americans have a feeling of gratitude. He is a small and gentle man, 65 years old.

UNUSUAL INTEREST.

Selection of a new Pope will have unusual interest for Italy, it was declared here tonight. The pressure of the decidedly conciliatory attitude taken by Benedict there will be speculation as to whether his policy will be continued or whether Cardinal Gasparrini should be chosen, a continuation of the same policy would be insured, but other cardinals might have different ideas. He, according to the

WASHINGTON CONFERENCE.

The Washington conference on the Limitation of Naval Armament is a definite and positive step in the only path that leads to commercial stability and its effect has already been felt in the exchanges of the world.

Commenting on the flow of gold to the United States, the statement said:

"The situation in the United States is unfortunate in that the high premium on American exchange attracts to this country the gold flow of the world. We are today overstocked with gold beyond our currency needs. The surplus earns no interest and serves no useful purpose."

"The United States feels it to be its own interest that this gold should be utilized in foreign countries and also that it be redistributed. From an economic point of view, the method of utilization is by the investment of capital abroad."

"The method of redistribution should be through loans for re-construction entered into by specific gold loans to countries which are in a position to undertake the reorganization of their currencies on a gold basis. The United States section regards it as mutually desirable and profitable that capital investments should be made in the national credit re-arrangement in the social order."

the reconstruction of Russia and they are not far from grinding of Lillie, Hiram, Yarden, rather than the reconstruction of their own devastated districts must depend upon the economic reconstruction of Russia for more than 100 years. France has not pillaged, murdered and destroyed her riches with her own hands but she has not confiscated the properties of foreigners, she has not disclaimed her debts, she has not imprisoned her engineers, learned men or architects. France is a creditor of Russia for more than $4,000,000,000 and Germany for more than $12,000,000,000. She is, therefore, determined that she will not come after people who have done all these astounding things which I have just enumerated. Above all she is determined not to pay them a single penny.

This, I say, is at least logical. If France has money to spare let her use it in the reconstruction of Lillie, Hiram, Yarden, rather than the reconstruction of their own devastated districts must depend upon the economic reconstruction of Russia for more than 100 years. France has not pillaged, murdered and destroyed her riches with her own hands but she has not confiscated the properties of foreigners, she has not disclaimed her debts, she has not imprisoned her engineers, learned men or architects. France is a creditor of Russia for more than $4,000,000,000 and Germany for more than $12,000,000,000. She is, therefore, determined that she will not come after people who have done all these astounding things which I have just enumerated. Above all she is determined not to pay them a single penny.

HAS HER OWN CANALS.

France has her own canals to reconstruct before thinking of the railroad construction of the Russian soviet. The French say to their American friends: "At the present moment we owe you three billion dollars, which you so generously loaned us. If you are thinking of reimbursing us, we were to ask you for three billion more, after we had imprisoned your citizens, robbed your banks in Paris, ransacked your resources, and if we were to come and demand these billions, which threats and calling you a rotten nation and declaring we were ready to decide your political regime and openly announce that we never would reimburse you what we owe, because it is unnecessary to pay a debt one owes to a capitalist? If we were to do all this would you loan us your money?"

FRENCH ATTITUDE.

I believe the reply could not be doubtful. It is therefore necessary to understand the reply and attitude of France regarding the scheme for the reconstruction of Russia.

At Genoa only speeches will be pronounced. It is scarcely possible for in eight days or even eight weeks it is impossible to reestablish the balance of international currencies, suppress an enormous amount of bankruptcies printed in Germany and Russia, reconstruct railways and regulate the tariff and customs, establish the equilibrium of the German budget and to find a currency exchange for Russia.

For three years the French have heard nothing but mythical speeches made to them. The French people desire to live and work. They demand order to be able to pay what they owe and must be paid what is their due.

Even in icy Lapland, milk is the essential food for health, but the friendly cow of the pasture gives way to the indispensable reindeer.

With the icy blasts, swirling the drifting snow in fantastic gyrations, the Laplander tends his herd and guards it as carefully as his life—for without the reindeer there would be no milk and with him as with you, Fresh Milk is a necessity.

Just as Fresh Milk adds to the fortitude of the dweller in the frigid north, so it will help you enjoy daily good health.

BABY'S .. FATHER .. IS .. SEVENTY-EIGHT

Civil War Veteran's Sons Are Fifty-five Years Apart.

Col. and Mrs. Thomas P. Murray and Warren G. Harding Murray.

CELEBRATING, simultaneously, the fifty-sixth birthday anniversary of one son and the first of another, Col. Thomas P. Murray, Civil War veteran, aged 78 years, last week prepared dinner for his guests at the family home, 1420 West Avenue 66, then entertained them with a series of close dances while they devoured his fried chicken and hot biscuits. If any other Civil War veteran can show a record compared to his Col. Murray wishes he would do so, for he believes that he has the youngest son of any veteran of the late unpleasantness between the States. His fifty-six-year-old son is George H. Murray; the younger is Warren G. Harding Murray. The mother is 30 years of age.

MARRIED FOUR YEARS.

Col. and Mrs. Murray were married by Rev. James L. Myers on December 4 (Col. Murray's birthday) four years ago. She was then Mrs. Martha Petty, a nurse who had just been graduated from the Woman's Alliance Hospital. She had four children, William Henry, Jack Rupert, Mary Elmyra and Hesterella Margaret Petty.

Mrs. Murray, who was only 27 when she married, has grown younger in appearance, while Col. Murray, who is still one of the most accurate riflemen of the country, is half hoping there'll be another war so he can organize a company that will do credit to America. Warren G. Harding Murray weighed eleven and three-quarter pounds at birth and today he weighs twenty-eight pounds. He has never been ill a single day, although he has a long way to go before he can echo his father's words: "I never was sick in my life and never had to go to a doctor for a prescription."

LAUGHS AT JOKES.

Of course Warren G. Harding Murray is thought by his fond parents to be the greatest baby on earth, not barring Col. Murray's grand-daughter, the child of Mrs. Isabelle Clark of Los Angeles. According to the parents, Warren G. "understands everything said to him," walks the floor almost from morning until night and never retires until 10:30 or 11 p.m.—when ever it pleases his mother to go to bed with him. He has a very keen sense of humor for he laughs uproariously at his father's jokes.

Besides his regular milk diet he has been eating bread and butter (almost constantly) since he was five months old and he began to walk at the age of nine months. At present, though he is declared to be the youngest son of a Civil War veteran in the United States, it is said a look of worry comes over his face when he is reminded of the fact that President Harding's father, also a veteran, was recently married to a girl 19 years of age.

Col. Murray, who was in the Twentieth Wisconsin Regiment during the Civil War, has been engaged in the mining business for the last forty-six years. He won his title when in the Egyptian campaign at Khartoum. He was a speaker during the World War.

Starts Work on Improving Cars of Yellow Lines.

Reconstruction of 106 street cars has been started by the Los Angeles Railway, according to General Manager Kuhrt. The work includes lengthening of the cars, painting and refinishing inside and out and in some cases installing new motors. During 1932 the railway rebuilt 123 cars and completion of the 1932 program will bring all passenger cars up to modern standards.

The 106 cars will be lengthened from thirty-nine feet one and one-half inches to forty-four feet six inches. They will seat forty-two instead of thirty-eight passengers and will have double steps divided for entrance and exit. Lengthening the cars will give larger platforms and permit faster loading. The work is being done in the company's main shops at Fifty-fourth street and South Park avenue.

The program will be timed to give the maximum number of passenger cars for the Christmas traffic. Only a few of the older type of cars will remain at the end of this year and they will be used for track work or other special uses. The estimated cost is $2000 per car or $212,000 for the 1932 reconstruction work.

FOUR HELD ON CHARGE OF ARSON.

Candy Factory Employees
Arrested After Blaze in Building is Investigated.

Detective Sergeants Hamilton and Simpson arrested four men early yesterday morning on suspicion of arson following investigation of a fire at 1531 Brooklyn avenue.

The fire broke out in a candy factory and was discovered by Henry Stribling, 1629 Brooklyn avenue, who gave the alarm, and then curbed the spread of the flames.

Capt. Enos, fire investigator, and the two detective sergeants discovered five buckets and a barrel partly filled with gasoline in the candy factory. A roll of cotton extended the length of the buckets and two lighted candles had been placed near the combustibles.

The men arrested gave their names as Mike Marcella, George Neato and Pete Saggio of 222 West Fifty-seventh street and James Fitzette of 415 South Avenue 20. All are connected with the candy firm, according to police.

The factory is insured for $4000, according to the officers, although the goods found represented a value of only a few hundred dollars. There were 600 pounds of candy and 550 dozen empty candy boxes.

Photographs were taken of the suspected incendiary layout and the buckets, gasoline and cotton were seized as evidence. The four men denied the charges against them.

VANITY BOX LIGHTED.

Device is Arranged So Girls May See Selves at Night.

Good morning, girls, did you see yourselves last night in the mirrors of your electrically lighted vanity cases? Probably not, for they're not "out" yet but they will be on the local market in less than a month, according to Stillman M. Smith of 4238 South Harvard boulevard, the inventor.

Mr. Smith received his inspiration for the invention through burning his finger one night while holding a lighted match in front of a mirror for a young lady friend who "wanted to see if her nose was shiny." The new electric vanity cases will adorn hand bags, make-up cases and similar carrying devices indispensable to femininity and will be very little more expensive than the ordinary cases, according to Mr. Smith.

Mr. Carlton, who came to California with his parents when he was a child, had been a resident of Los Angeles for fifty-seven years and, until three years ago, had lived near Central and Florence avenues. He leaves two brothers, R. H. Carlton of Los Angeles and H. M. Carlton of Ocean Park.

HARBOR POLICE PUT CURB ON MOTORISTS.

Observe the traffic regulations or get in trouble.

This is the ultimatum issued to motorists of the Los Angeles Harbor district by Capt. Clyde I. Plummer, commander of the Harbor Police Division. It was followed by a drive by the police with disastrous results to more than two score motorists.

Corner-cutting autoists who ignore traffic buttons are the particular object of the drive, but motorists who are satisfied with only one headlight, or who fail to show a tail light, are also coming in for a large share of attention on the part of the police.

"Practically every driver of a motor vehicle in this district is a violator of the traffic laws, one way or another, because of their ignorance of the laws," said Capt. Plummer. "It is surprising the great number of motorists who are unable to show that they have read the traffic laws when we question them, and who claim that they were unaware of such laws when they are booked. The most profitable thing the owner of a motor vehicle can do is to obtain a copy of the traffic laws and study them carefully."

ONE IN EVERY TEN OWNS CAR.

Optimistic Predictions Are Surpassed.

Chandler Company Compiles Interesting Data.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 22.—One person out of every ten in the United States now owns a motor vehicle—a grand total of approximately 10,500,000 passenger cars and trucks.

This staggering total represents the official registration of the various States for Dec. 31, 1921, and is an increase of 1,204,748 over 1920 when 9,295,253 cars and trucks were registered, according to information sent in by the Chandler Motor Car Company.

This striking gain during the last year is considered remarkable by officials of the automotive industry and surpassed by a wide margin their most optimistic predictions at the start of the year.

In some States the gain was as much as 35 per cent and ten States reported an increase of more than 20 per cent. The leaders in this group were Southern States—West Virginia, Florida and New Mexico. Ohio with a gain of 25 per cent led the industrial States.

The race between Ohio and New York for the supremacy became even more heated than ever before, but again turned out in favor of New York by a scant margin on some 11,000 cars and trucks. At the same rate of increase Ohio will overtake New York before spring.

The figures are: New York, 755,000; Ohio, 744,000.

Although New York leads in total motor-vehicle registrations, Ohio possesses more passenger cars. The Buckeye State boasts 658,000 automobiles against 531,915 for the Empire State. New York's truck registration is more than twice that of Ohio's.

Among the twelve leaders several States crawled up a notch or so. Pennsylvania, maintained third place, while California replaced Illinois in fourth place. The two States exchanging places, Michigan stepped up the ladder

WOMAN DIES IN STREET FALL.

Mother of Four Killed in Front of Children; Slips, Fractures Skull.

PORTLAND (Or.) Jan. 22.—Mrs. Guifo, aged 30, started with her four small children for church early today. On the sidewalk in front of her home she slipped and fell. Her husband rushed from the house to her side and found her dead. She had suffered a fractured skull.

It worked at first: The Federal officials have records of $10,000 worth of sales. Then last week they sold a case of the liquor to a prohibition agent. Saturday they were raided. Total results: Forty cases of liquor; 100,000 fake labels and stamps; three printers and half a dozen agents besides the principals. They will be arraigned Monday.

Indiana held ninth place, while Massachusetts moved up from eleventh to tenth. Missouri and Wisconsin climbed a notch to eleventh and twelfth positions, respectively, while Minnesota slipped back from tenth to thirteenth place.

Over one-half the cars and trucks of the country are registered in nine States, which is more than on the entire continent of Europe. These States are: New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, California, Illinois, Michigan, Texas, Iowa and Indiana. Their registrations total 5,300,000.

Comparison of the 1921 registration figures with the 1920 census tabulation shows that there is now one motor vehicle for every ten persons as compared with one for every twelve persons in 1920 and one for every fourteen persons in 1919.

These facts constitute the best obtainable proof that the automobile industry is continuing in its remarkable era of expansion. Furthermore, they emphasize the indispensability of the motor car during a year characterized by adverse business conditions, a decided gain was made, thereby presenting additional evidence that automobiles are purchased chiefly for business purposes.

Although New York leads in total motor-vehicle registrations, Ohio possesses more passenger cars. The Buckeye State boasts 658,000 automobiles against 531,915 for the Empire State. New York's truck registration is more than twice that of Ohio's.

Side Line Was Profitable for Three Partners

(RECEIVED DISPATCH.)

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Paul I. Mendelsohn is a druggist. As a side line he makes and bottles moonshine.

Martin F. Feht is a printer. As a side line he lithographs whisky labels and revenue stamps.

Henry Koenigsberger is a tailor. As a side line he runs a bootlegging establishment.

Mendelsohn, Feht and Koenigsberger conceived a plan to get rich quick. Mendelsohn was to make and bottle synthetic moonshine; Feht was to label it, and Koenigsberger was to sell it.

RELIGIOUS AND CIVIC NEEDS ARE GIVEN EMPHASIS.

Large Church Attendance; Discuss Burch Trial.

The religious census taken last Friday was perhaps partly responsible for the unusually well-filled churches yesterday, when Los Angeles churches were the scene of various topics of vital interest to the general community. Many sermons were marked by their emphasis on social and civic needs, these points being especially stressed by Rev. Robert G. A. Briegleb of the Trinity Methodist Church and Dr. Edgar Fay Daugherty of the Westlake Presbyterian Church. Spiritual lessons to be learned from the census were discussed by Dr. G. A. Briegleb of the Westlake Presbyterian Church and by Rev. Thomas G. Grievens of the Westlake Methodist Church.

DECLARES THERE IS NO SIN.

That the devil was not the cause of the census, but that the census was a result of the devil's work, was the theme of a sermon by Rev. Robert G. A. Briegleb of the Trinity Methodist Church, which was held at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The sermon was the most popular ever given by the pastor, and was attended by a large congregation. Rev. Briegleb declared that there is no sin, and that the only way to escape the devil's power is by faith in God. He said that the devil is a liar, and that he is always trying to lead us into sin. He said that the only way to escape the devil's power is by faith in God, and that the only way to escape the devil's power is by faith in God.

DECLARES SERVICE MAKES MEN GREAT.

"The Great and the Near Great" was the sermon subject of Rev. Jay N. Taft at Plymouth Congregational Church yesterday. Preaching from the text, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord," Mr. Taft said, in part: "An art critic tells us the old masters excel the present ones because they possessed soul. How true the line: 'Were I so tall as to reach the pole, I must be measured by my soul.' The world used to put great war chiefs on the highest pinnacles, but we are distributing this honor now. We have recently honored Gen. Fox and it is well, but he is a man of peace, and godly. It is about five years since France took a toll to determine who has been the greatest Frenchman. The great poets and preachers and statesmen, even Napoleon, were turned down for Louis Pasteur, on the ground that as a man of science, he had been the means of saving more lives in the century, than all the lives lost in the wars of the century. Jesus reminds us that the real aristocrat is no dilettante, no fashion plate chap. Great men have great souls. They know that thought, convictions, rule the world. The man who wins is the man who thinks he can, and true greatness is measured by service."

PRAYER AIDS BURCH, SAYS MINISTER.

Dr. Briegleb's Sermon is Based on Supplication of Prisoner's Father.

"Did Prayer So Influence Members of the Burch Jury That They Disagreed?" was the subject of a sermon by Dr. G. A. Briegleb at Westlake Presbyterian Church yesterday evening. Dr. Briegleb's sermon, in part, was as follows: "Prayer is the most potent thing in the world. It is not that prayer is anything but that God is everything. For prayer lays hold on God, or, more accurately, permits God to lay hold on man, so that it brings God into human affairs as the Infinite One. And when the Almighty is in the midst of things, He proves Himself to be the invincible, all-conquering God. The man who prays is the most potent man in the world. We are not surprised then that the father of the accused entered into his prayer closet as soon as the jury retired to consider the verdict. He knew full well that royal judgments and regal decrees frequently were changed overnight because some saint moved the heart of the Eternal. The evidence of sacred history was too strongly in favor of ancient and modern heroes of faith not to encourage him to strong crying and tears. And so this gentle, kind father of Arthur Burch agonized at the throne of Grace for the life of his boy. To him the Master of Galilee meant exactly what he said when he urged those that labored and were heavy laden to come unto him and rest. 'There can be no doubt that the disagreement of the jury was the divine answer to the fervent praying of this devoted father. All who have had the privilege of knowing him testify to the splendid Christian qualities of his life and character. God cannot withhold his mercy and goodness from such a one. From the first the father of Arthur Burch has insisted that the boy was not in his right mind. Those of us who had opportunity to watch the young man during the court sessions could not have failed to note the utter irresponsibility of the young man's demeanor. Standing in the shadow of the grave he exhibited only flippancy and an utter disregard for all the sanctities of life. Convinced of his mental condition his father could do nothing less than pray that his boy might not be convicted. If in the mind of the father there was the knowledge of the boy's guilt, even though the father could do nothing else if he were a true father but ask of God that his boy, 'have just one more chance.' 'Whenever may have been the motive dominating the heart of Dr. Burch, the fact stands out, God did hear his prayer and Arthur has another chance for life. It may be that the father believed him innocent, and being so, the all-wise God so that with the boy's feeble mental condition it would do no good to turn him loose, therefore, He used the disagreement of the jury to continue his stay under observation. 'God always answers true prayer. Not always in the way we wish it but in a way that is for our best. God is pleading for more men to pray. Thus he is pleading for you and me. There are more things wrought by prayer than his world dreams of. Let us use this method for the betterment of men's souls."

LESS THAN HALF ARE IN CHURCH.

Home Visitation Shows Majority Not Members of Religious Organization.

More than half the people living in Los Angeles do not belong to any church, according to a tabulation of returns shown by the home visitation conducted here last Friday. There are, however, fifty-nine varieties of religion, and in no city where this visitation work has been carried on, has there been a record which surpassed this in the number of distinctly designated different religious views, it was stated yesterday. Thousands of leaders of all faiths engaged in visiting homes last week. A large force of helpers worked until a late hour on the returns at the general headquarters last night. It is hoped by those in charge to have nearly all of the cards ready to deliver to the various pastors, priests, rabbis or organizations by tomorrow afternoon, if they will call at the general headquarters. The number of cards already gone through, indicate that more than 670,000 persons were visited in the city and adjoining sections yesterday. No tabulation is made of the cards as the purpose of the plan is not to ascertain the strength of any faith or denomination, but to place all the people in touch with the faith or denomination for which they express a preference. A number of the districts were short of workers Friday, only about two-thirds of those who sent in their names to assist, reported for service. The uncoordinated blocks in these sections will be assigned to the various churches and will be covered next week. Mr. J. Shreve Dunn, international superintendent home visitation, Chicago, has directed the work in Los Angeles. Local leaders closely connected with the work consider the results of the home visitation as offering great possibilities to all the churches, synagogues and Sunday-schools of Los Angeles.

Pastor Criticizes Churches for Indifference.

Rule of Fang and Claw Due to Attitude of People.

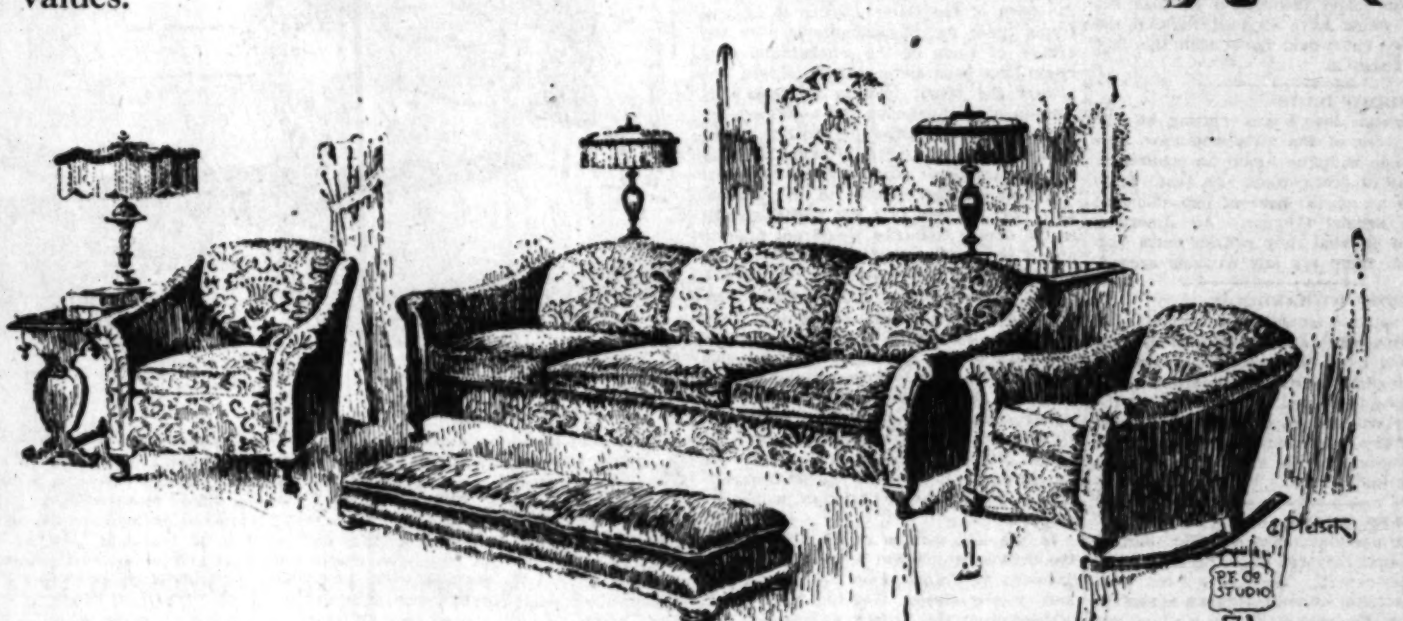

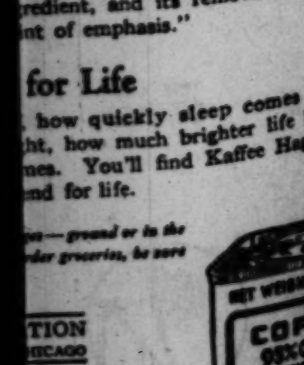

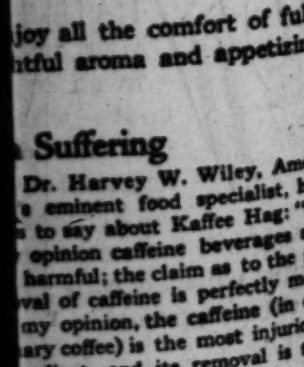

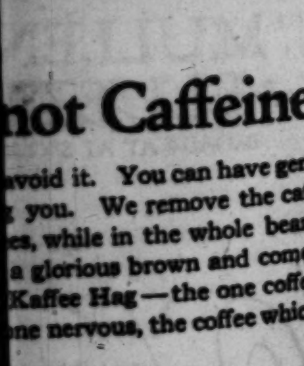

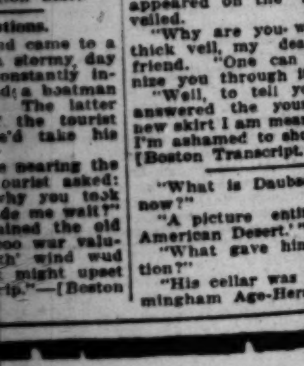

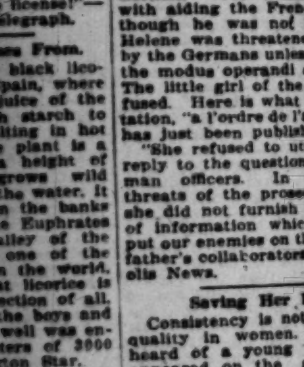

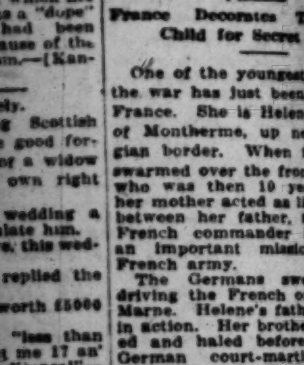

Citizenry Responsible for Thuggery, He Says.

Based his sermon on Police Statistician Lyon's report, for 1921, Rev. Edgar Fay Daugherty, pastor of the First Christian Church, yesterday criticized the "somnolent, preoccupied, indifferent" attitude of Los Angeles citizens. The statistician's report, which permits the operation of the rule of fang and claw. "Mr. Lyons is to be congratulated on the comprehensiveness of his report; its sordid details frame as black a blot as could be put on a municipality. The statistics show that for all the marvelous material achievement of the 'Angel City,' somewhere and somehow something is diametrically wrong with the administration of its life and affairs. 'Why should a city be, if not to conserve the life and strengthen the security of its citizenry? 'Who is to blame, how and why? The answer of truth and justice is: A somnolent, preoccupied, indifferent and criminally culpable public! If it be said that such a general position of responsibility for untoward facts implies no one and illuminates the black spot on which then I'll draw the line of responsibility closer and put it on the Christian people who attend and support the city's churches. I have heard it said that the Christian people of this city have the numbers and strength to secure anything they want whenever and wherever they want it. That claim is a lie unless the Christian people can be aroused to demand and secure that protection for human life and limb in our municipality which make a city's righteous pride and, failing which, its citizenry permit the operation of the rule of fang and claw."

not Caffeine

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, American food specialist, has to say about Kaffee Hag: "In opinion caffeine beverages are harmful; the claim as to the removal of caffeine is perfectly met; my opinion, the caffeine (in any coffee) is the most injurious ingredient, and its removal is the point of emphasis."

HOLDS THE EDGE.
 There is one thing to be said: Folks who have been grumbling at the eccentricities of the California climate of late would have a hard time figuring where to go to improve on it.

THE WHEELS GO ROUND.
 The anonymous author of "Mirrors of Washington" says that Hiram Johnson would have mightily enjoyed the French revolution. The insinuation is that the Senator would have enjoyed running the guillotine, but would have been the first one to dodge it.

THE SHORT HAIRS.
 German lovers are cutting off the flaxen locks of the girls who have anything to do with the American soldiers in the army of occupation. At that there must be a whole herd of bobbed-haired maidens around Coblenz. An American doughboy is what they call an extra hazard when there are any damsels around.

EXACTING WOMANHOOD.
 Recently a woman came into the local divorce court and complained because the husband had never given her one dollar in the entire course of the fifteen years she had been wedded. That is always the trouble. Women are expecting too much. Many of the matrimonial harks are on the shoals because of the exaggerated expectations of the wife.

SICKNESS AT SEA.
 The doctors now agree that there is nothing that they can do to prevent or relieve seasickness. They have been making all manner of tests with an apparatus that gives the patient all the motions and experiences of a rough ocean trip. They can find nothing to relieve that indescribable queasiness that is a part of mal de mer. Here is another chance to blame something on prohibition.

CLEANING THE HOME.
 The Methodist board of prohibition enforcement declares that home-brewing is on the wane and will yet become a lost art. Most of the home-brew is rather offensive stuff at best and has to be cooked pretty hard to develop a kick. That is why it is passing on. It is not that men and women are losing their thirst, but that home-brewing is frequently love's labor lost. It isn't really worth while.

RETAIL PROFITS.
 The house of Marshall Field & Co., which is one of the greatest merchandising concerns of America, has completed its statement for the past year. There was a business of $183,000,000 and it was turned over at a net profit of 2.39 per cent. This would seem to put a crimp in the impression that the retail dry goods men were garnering 100 per cent profits and making all the money there is in the world. They have to do a lot of business to make a reasonable sum of money.

HAND-WORKING MAN.
 Union electricians in Chicago now demand $135 extra a month to pay for the upkeep of their private cars used to take them to and from their work—when they work. The city agreed to pay $75 a month, but as it takes a lot of gasoline for the Sunday joy rides the men felt compelled to hold out for the larger figure. They hold that no gentleman can run a car on less than $4 a day. Being a union worker in Chicago would be a fine thing if they ever had jobs.

DEMOCRACY AND THE JONESES.
 Democratic club in Glendale is urging M. B. Jones for Governor. This is the first intimation that there were enough Democrats in Glendale to form a club. However, the city has been growing so rapidly that a Democrat was bound to get by once in a while. It is figured that there are more Joneses than Democrats in Southern California. By booming one of their number it might be possible to form a combination sufficient to arouse public attention.

BIRDS OF SONG.
 Lucien Muratore and Lina Cavillieri have left Mary Garden's Chicago Opera Company and Geraldine Farrar has parted company with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York. Professional jealousy in one form or another is said to be responsible for these changes. Sons of birds are not very patient with one another and if one shows a more brilliant plumage or strikes a new note harmony turns to discord. It is hard to keep a flock of grand opera singers in a single cage, even though the bars be of gold.

POWER OF STARS.
 Astronomers are now measuring the power and energy developed from the heat of the stars. The wonderful star Betelgeuse indicates a power which can be registered and computed by a trained astronomer with the aid of calculus and the dream book. It was known in Hollywood that some of our stars had drawing power, but that they could generate enough heat to run a windmill was never realized. In the future star power will have to be reckoned with. It is one of the forces that may yet be chained to push a wheelbarrow. Outside of the power of Bill Farnum or Douglas Fairbanks there is that of Orion and Sirius.

POPE BENEDICT.
 Wherever the cross of Catholicism points upward, on humble mission or an imposing cathedral, devout heads are bowed, for the message has been flashed to the farthest corners of the earth that Pope Benedict is dead. The Catholic faith knows neither race nor country. A fervent priesthood has carried its message to the waste places of the earth and the passage of no other world figure could probably have caused such universal mourning.

Pope Benedict will live alive in religious and civil history, for he wielded a powerful influence in many countries during the poignant years of the World War. And his voice was always raised for peace. He saw his faithful followers slaughtered under twenty flags on a hundred fields of battle and his great heart throbbled with the anguish of the widowed and the fatherless. He sought to protect not governments but peoples, and his voice was raised in protest against the use of cruel and inhuman methods of warfare.

During the heat of the conflict he was accused at different times by almost all the participating governments of favoring some of the others. Historians will point to this fact as an evidence that he was striving to lessen the horrors of war without giving personal assistance to any of the combatants. He frequently said, "They are all my children. My heart bleeds for them all."

Fortunate was the Christian world in having so gentle and humane a leader at the head of the Catholic faith in such a trying time; for, gaspable as were the crimes of some of the combatants, they might have been more general. There was always the latent fear in Germany and Austria of encountering the active opposition of Rome. During the critical period of the German-Austrian invasion the Italian government assembled all the art treasures of the country in the Eternal City; for it knew that the Catholic spirit in the enemy countries would not tolerate an air bombardment of the Vatican.

As the war period recedes the impression has grown among people of all faiths, and those without faith at all, that Pope Benedict observed as great a degree of neutrality as any one in his position could have done in such soul-wearying and heart-breaking times. During the period of reconstruction Pope Benedict made the Catholic church a bulwark against the spread of Bolshevism and anarchy in southern Europe. In so doing he performed a service for which all Christian people are grateful.

In the last months of his life he saw the breach, which had separated the government of France from the Vatican, almost wholly closed. For the first time in a generation the French government has allocated an ambassador to the Catholic court in Rome. One other ambition, however, it was not permitted to him to satisfy during his lifetime. A cable from Rome recounts that "The Pope in talking with Cardinal Bissetti just before becoming unconscious expressed regret that he must die before the Vatican effected official reconciliation with Italy." The accomplishment of this task will devolve upon his successor; but the beginning of the end of a dispute that has made each successive Pope a recedes in the Vatican for nearly a century has been made.

Pope Benedict has passed, leaving a void in the religious and civil world. His name will be recorded in history as one of the outstanding figures of the World War and one of the illustrious heads of the Catholic faith.

THE EXCITED REV. MR. CRAFTS.
 Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, the reformer, is in a state of agitation again. This time his excitement is the result of the employment of Will Hays as head of the motion picture industry.

Mr. Crafts professes to believe that it is a base plot of some kind to flood the world with wicked and improper photographs to bring about the ruin and moral demoralization of the young and innocent. Paul Reverie-like, the Rev. Mr. Crafts is crying the alarm into the mysterious night; he says this means that the movies are going into politics. He does not state in particular just what disasters will accrue to the world when the movies go into politics; but he leaves it to be assumed that they will bring about something dreadful.

Take them by and large, the motion picture producers are fair-to-middling business men engaged in the manufacture of a product to be sold to the public. Although they are naturally anxious to give the public what it most wants to pay money for, the producers have behaved pretty well.

Their great difficulty has been a lack of cohesion. The good ones, with conscientious scruples, for instance, have been put in the position of seeing the bad ones make fortunes out of pictures that should not have been put out.

On account of the few-and-far-between inquiries of the worst of them, the decent element has been obliged to suffer an often unreasonable and unjust censorship. Each one has had to make up his own code of ethics as he went along and according to his own individual lights.

A systematic adjustment of these matters and a uniform code of action is a necessity—both for the picture producers and the public.

And that is the "why" of Will Hays. He will be to pictures what Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis is to organized baseball. It cannot be otherwise than a public benefit. Will Hays is the highest type of man; his connection with anything is a pledge and a surety. His appointment concentrates a definite responsibility. In the event that picture producers stray from the beaten paths of rectitude, it will no longer be necessary to hunt the haystack over for the wretched little fly-by-night producer who has sought to grab a few ill-gotten gains by doing something he should not do. There will now be somebody to whom the public can point the accusing finger.

The busy Mr. Crafts has squealed before he was hurt.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

A DELICATE CONTROVERSY.
 That movement, inaugurated with an irate mass-meeting of Wilshire residents in the neighborhood of Tenth and New Hampshire streets, to protest against the erection of a Japanese Methodist church in their district, is fraught with irony. Even while one sympathizes with its prejudices, one could have wished that different methods had been adopted.

For it is ironical that this country, which contributes so generously to foreign missions to win the orientals to the worship of Jesus Christ, whose missionaries abound in Nippon, whose schools and universities play so large a part in the Orient, which in fact claims to be and financially supports the contention that we are a Christian country, placing our first and last faith in God as set forth even upon our dollars, could loudly and publicly protest against the erection of an apparently spiritual church in our own midst for the spiritual needs of our brown brethren.

"You must worship God," say the Wilshire residents in effect, "but not in our best districts. It has cost a great deal to teach you to worship our God, but really you must not take advantage of our enthusiasm and altruism by intruding your worship into our nicest residential sections. As a matter of fact, we don't like you and we don't want you in our vicinity. However, we presume God does, since he made you, too, but we must positively insist upon your building your temples to Him where it won't depreciate the value of property. We Wilshire residents don't even like our own churches in our district, we like peace and quiet. But, of course, we are God-fearing people and churches are all very well in their place. We are convinced that God Himself appreciates the justice of our arguments. Please don't misunderstand us. We entirely approve of Christianity, especially for the Japanese, who obviously used its Christian tenets. But if you insist upon building a church for the Japanese in the neighborhood of Tenth and New Hampshire streets, we will hear His Divine messages in well, down it all, you must go somewhere else, that's all."

And one can picture God awaiting the outcome of the controversy. Where exactly do His churches stand in Christian America? Only in such places where they cannot "depreciate the value of property?" Some smaller cities were even wont to brag of the number of their churches but perhaps not of those dedicated to brown converts.

Many large cities are proud of their churches. Time was when real estate men mentioned the proximity of church and schools as an attraction to new residents. But those cannot be the "fashionable residential districts," for it has remained for one of our own to protest against the erection of two churches within a few weeks of each other, one for white fellow citizens and one for brown converts. So while there is a shade more prejudice evinced against the Japanese intrusion, they are really quite impartial about it. Wilshire does not need churches, any kind of churches—they want peace and quiet.

It would seem to have been case for "secret diplomacy." The mass meeting, the publication of protests, the warning banners, and the resolution condemning Bishop Leonard, ruling head of the Methodist Church in California, all seem a shade blatant and scarcely in accord with the refinement and gentility of a polite residential district of Christian homes. One would like to have seen them just a little hesitant and perplexed, just a little anxious to combine Christian tolerance with the exaction of property values, and endowed with just a particle of a sense of the fitness of things, mindful of the ironical condition they were raising.

Admitted that a Japanese church might encourage a Japanese settlement, and that a Japanese settlement in an exclusive white district is undesirable from many other points of view, there was vast opportunity for tact, for helpful consideration, for considerate understanding, for "secret diplomacy" that would soften the edges of

CONCERNING HUSBANDS.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

When one considers the luck some women have, even with a third or fourth husband, it would appear that our selective abilities are rather dubious. Actually, of course, we are no brighter than the men who declare for the domesticated virtues, but generally select a good-looking fashion plate.

Time was when we did not have much selection in the matter. Not unless we were peculiarly dashing and super-charming. We were just meekly grateful for anything that came along and claimed us. And it was good form to murmur something about the honor that was being conferred upon us, in being offered the custody of his hand and heart. And we were trained to study gentlemanly preference and to be the sort of girl gentlemen admired.

But lately a new concession has crept in. Quite a number of newspaper stories have appeared on the kind of man women admire. One writer has it that the cave-man with the savage mutter who whirls us off our feet and off our heads was the arch-female fascinator. Another declares we prefer "em perfumed and pomaded, highly-groomed, silk-shirted and intimately attentive." W. L. George is convinced we like "em sophisticated, round about 40, with a dash of culture and a shade patronizing. Snowy Baker is of opinion we prefer them with a massive physique, athletic, acrobatic, chesty, but not necessarily too mentally developed.

But there doesn't seem to be one proponent for the nice, modest, domesticated chap whose place is in the home, who is a genius at putting up shelves, making rusty locks work, fixing the pulleys on the clothes line, readjusting electric lights and all those little things that go to make home cheerful and keep mother at home at night.

Yet that is the kind of fellow that really makes the most successful husband. Those other types are all very well for Sundays and holidays. They do nicely for occasional dinner partners and walking sticks, but the man who can keep a woman in a perpetual state of grateful admiration and wonder is he who can smile confidently in the face of a plumbing crisis or a lock crisis or an absentee shelf crisis, and say, "Oh, I will have that put right in a jiffy. It is quite simple"—and does actually have it right in a jiffy.

Of course, we like them to be presentable—but not too dashingly good looking to arouse vengeful covetousness. We like them clean, neat, but we don't care a cent about the perfume. It is a happy coincidence when they evince a little culture on the side, but as between looks that work and literary culture, the looks win every time if we can't have both.

We have no special objection to them being athletic and sportily inclined, with nice knobby muscles, providing we read some of the capacity of those muscles in the form of some rather stylish gardening. The fellow whose muscles can box an opponent into a jelly but proves unable to dig up the vegetable patch leaves us cold and uninterested when, maritally, we settle down to domesticity.

We have heard a good deal about the poor man who marries a shrew in white satin and orange blossoms, but finds she can't boil an egg or make a decent cup of coffee. But his chagrin is as nothing to the female who annexes a handsome man, and finds he is incapable of driving a nail without smashing his finger, and who has to walk two miles to the nearest garage when a tire blows out. He isn't a husband, he is a human Pekinese spaniel.

And what kind of a father do the boys worship? Give them a father who can make and fix a kite, overhaul the automobile and explain its intricacies to them, discuss the digging of caves and the building of camp fires with intelligent helplessness, spin tops, fix the lawn mower, restore statues to rollfulness and all those fundamentally important things—and every other boy in the neighborhood envies them with passionate longing.

Don't care if he can't quote Shakespeare and smells of machine oil, just so long as he can explain how the new airplanes work. That's the sort of thing that keeps both the boys and mother at home.

There has been a good deal said about the necessity for schools for wives and mothers, but really the urgent need of the day is proper training for husbands and fathers. Every woman wants this kind of a husband, no matter what kind of a Johnny she marries. Just as every man wants a capable domestic wife no matter what kind of a fashion plate he is selected to fill the bill.

There are lots of ways of winning a wife—women are not so responsive to so many kinds of treatment—before marriage. But the only sure way to keep one in a proper state of admiration and affection is by the efficient performance of modest domestic duties that she can't do herself. Then she can be counted upon to say, "Oh, John, you are wonderful! At satisfying intervals, and mean it—on the tangible results."

RIPLING RHYMES.

THE OLD BOYS.

I live where many old boys come to spend their years declining; no more for them the busy hum of commerce, they're opining. The heat and burden of the day they're borne, it seems, for age, and now it's up to them to play, like birds released from cages. When they arrive they're all so glad it does me good to view them; but soon I see them looking and ranting come and chew them. This is the life they thought would please, in years of stern endeavor, long days of play and restful ease, and hard work gone forever. This is the life of which they dreamed in years of busy mulling, where trolleys clanged and whistles screamed and weary crowds were toiling. And now they wish they might be back amid the wild commotion; they walk along the sandy track, and rubber at the ocean. They gaze upon the views sublime, their faces split with raving, and spend large portions of their time dogstaging and dogstaging. Soon, soon they'll be of going. The heat and burden of the day they're borne, it seems, for age, and now it's up to them to play, like birds released from cages. TWO MINUTES OF OPTIMISM.

BY HERMAN J. STICH.

"Don't! Versus 'Don't!'" I have always thought that the "Don't!" of interrogation is much more effective than the "Don't!" of command or warning. For example, "Don't you think that all the modern miracles are performed by St. Industry?"

Don't you see that a word of encouragement to the living is worth a volume of praise of the dead? Don't you know that a man can't become perfect in a hundred years, but he may become corrupt in a day?

Don't you know that it is easy to break a dollar, but difficult to reassemble the pieces of the dead? Don't you know that the way to save is to put a certain part of all you earn into the bank, and that that should be the first part and not the last part?

Don't you know that when a man's cup of fortune is filled to the brim it takes a level head to carry it?

Don't you know that while there is nothing new under the sun there are a thousand and one novel applications?

Don't you know that even a journey of a thousand miles begins with one step?

Don't you know that grasshoppers never get anywhere because they are always busy jumping?

Don't you know that the peculiarity of man is that once in a while he stops and thinks? Stop and think once in a while.

Don't you know that the only cure about the cure that a poor workman brings? Don't you know that if he had watched his step he wouldn't have tripped and gotten hurt?

"TOL'ABLE DAVID."

BARTHELMES OUTDOOS HIMSELF IN FEATURE.

By Grace Kingsley.

They didn't know you were looking at them, those folks in "Tol'able David," who went ahead and made a drama out of the real tragedies and comedies of everyday life. They didn't know you were looking at them—so it is not forced on you, neither the tragedy nor the comedy. Nobody posed nor strutted, nor was sorry for himself. But it's all there for you to take or leave, one of the greatest pictures of the year, or that has ever been made, because of its poignant sincerity, its thrilling suspense growing naturally out of its situations and its characters, its homely, but startling, reality.

No matter where you chance to be sitting in the Kineplex Theater, you won't be sitting there long. You'll be right up among those homely folks of the mountain—Joseph Barthelme's characters. Henry King, who directed, has managed to produce a picture that fully the atmosphere, the sinister suspense, the characterizations, the soul drama, which is, after all, the only real drama of the present time.

Richard Barthelme's playing of David, the lad who dreamed his dreams, but who held in his hand the life of his brother, is a masterpiece by his own humble nature and every circumstance, and whom everybody called "Tol'able David," is a many-faceted gem, a character which it will take long to erase from your memory.

Poor Tol'able David! Longing to avenge his brother's injury, by which he was made an invalid for life, but held in check by his brother's clinging to his feet, trying, "David, David, you're the only man we got now!"

Poor Tol'able David! Drudge in the grocery store, when his soul longs to be the Jesus of the mountains, driving the United States mail back as his brother did before him. Poor Tol'able David! Face to face with the big tragedy of his young life when he loses that mail on his very first trip. A small thing that, but made vivid in Barthelme's hands, even as our own every day tragedies are vivid in our own lives.

I defy anyone not to thrill and weep when David finally arrives, bruised and blood-stained, from his battle with the sinister Hather.

Doubtless there's nobody on the screen who could give this role not only the poignant appeal, but also his vivid force which Barthelme does.

All the characters are astonishingly real and convincing. Like the people you know, no matter how those people have been dressed or what their manners. Lack of space prevents me from citing a separate list of praises for Gladys Hulette as Esther Hatherburn, to Marion Abbott as David's mother, to Walter P. Lewis as Ernest Torrence, Ralph Yearley, Forrest Robinson, Laurence Bédinger, Edmund Gurney, Warner Richmond, Harry Hagan and Patterson Hall. They all live and breathe and are your neighbors.

"Tol'able David" is a picture that will give you more "Tol'able David" in your mind.

INVITE BERNHARDT HERE.

Mrs. Sarah Bernhardt probably will make a special trip to America to be the guest of Los Angeles in what promises to be the greatest celebration ever held by the film industry.

The invitation that is expected to make the great French actress reconsider her decision to spend the remainder of her life on the other side of the Atlantic was called to her yesterday by a committee of representatives of the picture profession that includes practically all the leaders of the cinema art.

If Mrs. Bernhardt accepts this invitation—and there is every reason to believe that she will—the anniversary of the actual birth of the motion-picture art will be celebrated here with an elaborate program in which she will play a prominent part.

The date of the celebration is based upon the time of the making of the first feature motion picture, ten years ago, generally accepted by film producers as marking the real beginning of the photoplay today.

William DeMille heads the committee that was called together yesterday for the purpose of drafting and sending the cable invitation to Mrs. Bernhardt. The document is unusual in that it bears the signatures of representatives of practically every big producing company, including not only producers, but directors, stars and every department of picture making.

REVIEWS.

"SATURDAY NIGHT."

PIQUANT TRAPPINGS MAKE DE MILLE FILM AMUSING.

By Edwin Schallert.

Sometimes I feel that Cecil De Mille has missed his vocation. He should have been a gag comedy director. He has such an eye for funny tricks and situations. On top of everything else, think what a wonderful title "Saturday Night" would have been for a bathing film!

"Saturday Night!" It's showing at Grauman's Rialto, and unless I miss my guess it's going to clean up beautifully. Quezigue's fears, silk and lace lingerie, new swimming costumes and all of that sort of thing makes a popular De Mille film more popular!

Yes—without any joking—I do believe that Mr. De Mille's latest essay on marriage and its follies and grievances, as an effect social world knows them, is going to be successful—as entertaining.

The director-general has really come back. The film is original, by Joanne MacPherson, and it seems to be more in his line than the adaptations. It is a corollary, or whatever you call it, of "Don't Change Your Husband" and "Why Change Your Husband?"—the latter of which is a sequel to the first.

Mr. De Mille has attained by his previous successes.

You see, there are two sets of characters, and De Mille mixes them. He marries the rich man to the poor girl and then starts in to show that the combination doesn't work. The plot is circumstantial in large measure.

The marriage of the chauffeur and the rich girl is far more logical than the other, because such things happen. The other set of characters is not handled with as much skill. For example, the little Irish girl, who is supposed to be a gum-chewing prostitute just when she becomes a member of the millionaire's household doesn't fit in with your previous view of a Cinderella. It indicates a certain lack of sensitive feeling in the treatment of character.

Of course, the thing that Mr. De Mille is driving at is the folly of marrying. His theme is that oil and water will not mix. Each will seek its own level. He sacrifices morals to the conventions of the day, because he gives you nothing to chew on. The other set of characters, and more jocosely, several years and has his people marrying according to their heads of living. The film leaves you dissatisfied because it is so obvious.

The manner of sustaining the interest is capital. Each set of tricks is cleverly devised by anybody as employed. There is fine satire in the unrequited objecting to the smiling of the unrequited, and the cultured finding fault with the gum-chewing of the unrequited. Here is where Mr. De Mille does meet your highest admiration.

What an amusing bit, too, is that where the folding bed is transformed into a piano in the cheap apartment alongside the elevated! What a clever stunt where the unrequited takes the hairpin to fish the cherry out of the cocktail glass.

There's also a bathing party which might be a bit risqué, and a spectacular fire to add to the tingle of the picture. I must confess, though, that the sum of the effect of having here is very much like riding around on a whirly-gig, a scenic railway or some such contraption at a Coney Island.

In the new De Mille set of players, Edith Roberts stands out as a center of fascination. She has given us something altogether new for her as Shamrock O'Day. Leatrice Joy is equally sincere in her role, and both the women of the story are much more than the men. Jack Mower seems to be exceptionally well cast as Tom MacPherson, the Romeo-chauffeur. Conrad Nagel has a difficult type to visualize, but he acts splendidly. There are other excellent bits of trouble by Edythe Chapman, Julia Faye, Sylvia Ashton, James Neill, W. A. Clarke and Betty Francisco.

MAY MURRAY PRANCES IN "PEACOCK ALLEY."

A very good play was written once concerning the sorrows and problems of a young French woman transplanted through marriage to a middle-western village, and how she was misunderstood by the villagers, while she, too, misunderstood them. I cannot remember the name of it, but certainly "Cleo of Peacock Alley" at Loew's isn't it!

In that original story, the problems of the young woman were developed naturally, their solution was logical. In "Cleo of Peacock Alley" it isn't plot development, but Mae Murray's development we see.

Yet Mae Murray has very great dramatic ability. That fact at least comes out in course of this story, despite every effort of the author to make the play an obvious, clicking thing.

And that Mae Murray is popular was evidenced by the remarks of the ladies about me, to the effect: "Oh, isn't she perfect?" "Oh, isn't she darling?" "What a thing to have!" Mae Murray with five years ago at Universal, but nobody cared at that time, not until she had magnificent gowns, and undress her artistically, that fans began to sit up and take notice.

Miss Murray is justly lovely, no doubt of that, and she has a beautiful, supple body, and she dances nicely, but not nicely enough. I should say, more so, if she does in the play. As the French girl, she is overly graceful. She seems too much. She gives the impression of suffering from St. Vitus dance! Very pose, to be sure, is a picture, but there are too many poses.

Though she is a toast of Paris, she is chemically pure, so the young American marries her, and she dresses like a French star for the reception, and they won't have her. All the old hokum of cat restraint on the ladies, and say leers from the gentlemen, is employed. Young hussies—yes, I see you get the end from the beginning. She goes back to her dancing, to prison, etc. And in the end she seeks her in her far-off home in Normandy, where he finds her, not engaged in some occupations like washing dishes that would make her look unattractive, as would be the case in real life, probably, but picking flowers or something.

Little son yells, "Mama! My hubby opens wide eyes in joy and huzzay and says, 'Why didn't you let me know?'" And there's a three-second clinch. Monte Blue is the saccharine hero.

Miss Murray's beauty and real talents make her deserving of the very best direction.

FRENCH WAR EPIC AT CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of worth "Faccus" (Accuse) the French picture which is showing at the California Theater this week, really does stand a page of reviews. Were it not that I question somewhat the interest in its name and its fame would say that it was destined to be a far-reaching success.

"The Four Horsemen" went over where everybody said that war stories were out and maybe "Faccus" will too, because it respects it is the greatest epic of the war that has been shown on the screen.

Somber and deep as mid-ocean wide in its viewpoint as the span of a continent, immeasurably fine in its idealism, this feature despite its technical faults rises far above the routine drama in significance as a Mt. Blanc over the familiar hillcock. It has the sweep, the power, the keep up with to feel into your heart, as well as your mind, and to stir the holiest and sincerest impulses you may have felt during the war.

Of course, you have to do mental gymnastics to keep up with the French continuity. There is no rhyme or reason in the way the plot switches from place to place and period to period of time. It takes imagination to cover all the ground that is wanting, and for will be celebrated here with an elaborate program in which she will play a prominent part. The date of the celebration is based upon the time of the making of the first feature motion picture, ten years ago, generally accepted by film producers as marking the real beginning of the photoplay today.

William DeMille heads the committee that was called together yesterday for the purpose of drafting and sending the cable invitation to Mrs. Bernhardt. The document is unusual in that it bears the signatures of representatives of practically every big producing company, including not only producers, but directors, stars and every department of picture making.

The title "Shame" is won from the feeling the hero has when he discovers that he is half Chinese and after he is told by a Chinese that neither occidental nor orientals will claim him. It is an old Chinese villain who reveals to him his birth, or, at least, pretends to. But it does seem to me that any sane young man with brains enough to be head of a big business organization, as this man was, would have investigated the matter and found out the truth for himself.

At the end, as you have possibly guessed all along, he finds he isn't Chinese at all, but all-same "Mellon man," and there's been all the bother for nothing. It's always that way. We'd love to see a story in which the hero or heroine really was half-Chinese—and see what they'd do about it! There'd be something to do to unwind that situation, I grant you. Jack Gilbert is master of too fine and vivid a method to be made to overact as he does in this play. Remember the work he had to do for the old line directors? Doris Pawn is entirely sympathetic in the role of the wife, a new departure for her, we are so used to seeing her as a vampire. Anna May Wong is going to do very great things some time. If they give her a chance, William V. Mong as usual is entirely satisfactory. And what a marvelous Chinese characterization. George Siegmann gives us of the Chinese villain.

You'll be completely entertained by this film.

"Disraeli" Closing.

The engagement of the film of "Disraeli" is to be closed tomorrow at the Mission Theater. The feature will be followed Wednesday by the production of "Hail the Woman," in which are featured Florence Vidor, Madge Bellamy, Tully Marshall, Lloyd Hughes, Charles Meredith and others.

more than any one thing do you realize that neither the war nor its sorrows nor the joys of peace can sweep away aught of faults or virtues of men. The sentimentalists were guilty of such a contention. It lies with each individual who was in the war or out of it to balance his own ledger.

Mr. Severin Mars as the husband is one actor in a thousand. His portrayal will stay with you as a memory of surpassing dramatic quality. Miss Marie Dauray is strangely unlike our idea of the film heroine, but she is a splendid artist and in her way an attractive woman. Her thought-power is tremendous. Romauld Joubé is exceptional as the poet. Mr. Desbarden and the little Angèle are also splendid as is in its temperamental feeling, the direction of Abel Gance.

There's also a bathing party which might be a bit risqué, and a spectacular fire to add to the tingle of the picture. I must confess, though, that the sum of the effect of having here is very much like riding around on a whirly-gig, a scenic railway or some such contraption at a Coney Island.

In the new De Mille set of players, Edith Roberts stands out as a center of fascination. She has given us something altogether new for her as Shamrock O'Day. Leatrice Joy is equally sincere in her role, and both the women of the story are much more than the men. Jack Mower seems to be exceptionally well cast as Tom MacPherson, the Romeo-chauffeur. Conrad Nagel has a difficult type to visualize, but he acts splendidly. There are other excellent bits of trouble by Edythe Chapman, Julia Faye, Sylvia Ashton, James Neill, W. A. Clarke and Betty Francisco.

Phelps-Dodge

to be Delayed.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.)

CLIFTON, (Ariz.) Jan. 20.—

The Phelps-Dodge properties in this district states that operation of the local mines probably will be delayed until after other large Arizona properties have been started.

He said that mine operations must be brought to a lower level. About 150 men are employed and there will be no material increase in new construction work has been started.

Plans are expected to be completed within sixty days for re-modeling No. 6 concentrator. The work will cost $400,000, will provide for a capacity of 6000 tons a day and will cause a material improvement in extraction percentage.

Announcement has been made of the following staff: assistant superintendent, J. O. Ambler; mine superintendent, Arthur Crowfoot; chief engineer, G. M. Robinson; chief geologist, McHenry Mosier; store manager, L. J. Owen at Morenci and C. B. Nussimaker at Clifton and Miami.

DRILLS GO DEEP AT RICHFIELD.

Extension of District by New Wells is Expected.

Standard Company Sinking at Kellogg No. 2.

Union's Chapman No. 1 is Again Producing.

BY E. J. MUNGIER.

Richfield is now the home of the deep drilling wells of the Southern California field. The Clark Oil Company drilling on Hugo Wetzel No. 1 is now at 4320, the showings are just ordinary and officials of the company will be satisfied with a 200 barrel well.

The Petroleum Midway's Richfield-Torba now standing cemented at 4600 and 4800 feet is scheduled to extend the eastern boundary of the Richfield district. Some good showings of oil have been noted in this 6-deep test well and a commercial producer is confidentially expected.

The Richfield Giant has 4300 feet of hole and is getting ready to go on down and make further explorations. At 4214 this well at one time looked like an oil well, but water trouble has prevented the realization of production.

The Ridge Oil Company's No. 1 has used the 4600 foot mark and to date has not shown a lot of encouragement. Correlations with the deep Standard Oil Company's Kresenmer wells show that something is struck in the next 100 feet the well is destined for the dry column.

KELLOGG DRILLING.

The Standard Oil Company has its Kellogg No. 2 drilling at 4350 and expects to go several hundred feet deeper before getting into the "pay." The Standard recently abandoned its Valar No. 1 drilled to 5112 and Lotus-O'Brien No. 1 drilled to 5097.

The Wonder Company, Ltd., has its No. 2 on water pumping test now for almost two months. Wonder No. 2 is 4500 feet deep and the water test is being made at 4300.

The Union Oil Company has its Chapman No. 1 back on production. Several weeks ago this great producer that has put almost 2,000,000 barrels of oil into storage suddenly quit. Prior to quitting this well had dwindled down to a couple hundred barrels. Redrilled and cleaned out the famous discovery well is running close to 700 barrels.

A deal of considerable importance to the oil industry was put through a few days ago at Huntington Beach by E. J. Miley, Mr. Miley was on the job of the Petroleum Company, the new company takes over all the personal holdings of E. J. Miley and also the properties and holdings of the Pettiford Syndicate. The new company takes over the holdings of Miley and the Pettiford in both Huntington Beach and Long Beach.

HUNDRED BARREL WELL.

The Eddystone Oil Corporation's deep well on the north side of the Huntington Beach field has been under close watch for a month. The well was completed a few days ago and put on production. Showings led officials of the company to believe they had something big. On putting the well on production it started off at a hundred barrels. The Eddystone's Ashton No. 3 completed at 3900 on production a 100-barrel well.

The General Petroleum closes its development work at Huntington Beach with the abandonment of Community No. 1 at 4326. At no time did this well ever show any encouragement and the General Petroleum goes away with the feeling that there is nothing there.

The Golden Dome is satisfied that its well in the productive belt and will go deeper. The Standard Oil Company's Thompson No. 1 at 3905 gave the Golden Dome the lead in the productive belt.

Huntington Union No. 1 (McInyre) has passed the 4400-foot mark and shows nothing. There is a feeling now that this well will be numbered among those also drilled. The Elliott Core Drilling Company got an excellent sample at 4402-4405, the sand looked as good as ever any field produced, but it carried no oil, not even a color.

One of the latest producers of recent date at Huntington Beach is the O'Donnell No. 1. This well was completed at 3731 by the Federal Drilling Company. Al Johnson and Tom Pike are guiding geologists of the Federal Drilling Company.

LONG BEACH BOOST.

Long Beach got its biggest production boost this week. Three companies added to the output of this new field. The Sandburg Petroleum Company covered itself with the big honors by bringing in what looks like the biggest well on the hill. Sandburg No. 1 drilled to 3300 feet passed through 335 feet of oil sand and has the marks of a 1000-barrel well. It will probably be several days before this well gets under way.

The Jergins well is not to be commended yet. This new producer on account of being finished up with the rotary had a lot of mud and water in the hole to get out of the way before the oil could flow in the natural courses. Jergins No. 1 has made flows running all the way from 150 to 600 barrels and it is expected that when this well gets in position to produce it will make a 600-barrel well at the least.

The San Martena Oil Company is scheduled to drill 25 barrels of new production to the Signal Hill output. Both No. 1 has a record of 1500 barrels and there is little doubt that when the cement is drilled out the well will duplicate its first performance. Freeman No. 1 should make 600 barrels with a 100-barrel capacity.

The Interstate Oil Company has entered into a working agreement with the A. & T. Oil Company to develop its Signal Hill lease. It is understood that the Interstate will develop on a 60-50 basis and that development work will begin in the very near future. For some time the Interstate has been looking for holdings in both Huntington and Long Beach.

UNITED GETS WELL.

The United Oil Company has gotten into the Signal Hill production column. Daniel No. 1 com-

STATE MINERAL OUTPUT.

Production Past Year Estimated at More Than Two Hundred and Forty Million Dollars.

The total value of the mineral production of California for the year 1921, says a bulletin issued yesterday, is estimated by the statistical division of the State Mining Bureau under direction of Fletcher Hamilton, State Mineralogist, to have been $244,854,218. This is, in part, detailed in the tabulation below; but, as there are more than fifty mineral substances on California's commercial list, it is impracticable at this early date to obtain definite figures on other than the more important items.

The report forms are being mailed out to the operators in all mineral lines, and the statistical division of the final and complete report will depend upon the promptness of their replies. The State Mining Bureau is heartily co-operating in the collection of the data, and the end of the results may be made known early, says the bulletin.

This estimated total of $244,854,218 is an increase of $2,757,348 over the value of the 1920 production, and is mainly to be accounted for by an increase in the production of petroleum and silver. Preliminary reports indicate a record yield by petroleum for the year 1921. The increase in total value for the year was not in the same proportion as the increase in quantity, because the price of silver was lower ($1.46 per barrel, against $1.73) than that for 1920. The figures here used are the average of quotations for 24 degrees gravity oil in the San Joaquin fields during 1921.

GOLD MINING.

Gold mining in California has apparently passed the low point in its career during the war-time and post-war economic situation, and is now on the up-grade again. Reports indicate a revival in many gold districts and the production for the year, based on eleven monthly shipments, is estimated at $15,800,000 or an increase of approximately $1,000,000 over the production of $14,800,000 at $1 per ounce, the greatest of any year (except one, 1894) in California. This is pleated at 2390 started off flowing by heads and looks like a 400-barrel well.

Interesting things are developing in the B. & M. Oil Company's well at Belmont. The shale at 2600 showed colors enough to lead to the belief that there was oil. The showings were so good that Elliott, the core drill man, was called on to make some cuts.

That Garden Grove is to get a place on the oil map of Southern California is almost a foregone conclusion. The Standard Oil Company's well at Belmont, 5300 feet and the showings are not any better than when drilling first started.
